The BRHD expects all residents to follow these orders. The goal of the order is to flatten the curve, reduce the strain on hospitals and the healthcare system, and minimize the impact on medical resources for those with the highest need. Adhering to the orders will keep our community safe. Violations are outlined with the order: a first violation is punishable as a Class B Misdemeanor. Subsequent violations are punishable as Class A Misdemeanors.

What is the difference between this order and social distancing?

Social distancing is an important first step in preventing the spread of a disease like COVID-19 that allows people to go about their daily activities while taking extra health and safety precautions. This order supports the directives of the Governor and requires people to remain in their homes unless they are going to work or are doing an essential task like going to the grocery store.

What if I still have to go to work?

Businesses that remain open are reminded to comply with all public health orders, offer telework options wherever possible, continue to follow strict hygiene policies, and implement enhanced social distancing measures in the workplace where telework is not an option. If you are experiencing symptoms or are currently in isolation, you should stay home and follow the guidelines provided by a doctor.

Can I still get together with other family members?

While this order does not apply to a family with more than 10 people in the same household, the order encourages us all to stay home as much as possible and to limit travel to only essential travel. For your safety, as well as the safety of those in your community, you should remain home and not visit friends or family without urgent need. If possible, it is recommended that you drop off supplies, food, and medication to those relatives in need of assistance, but minimize interactions.

What services are exempt?
